We specialize in building dream homes from inception through completion," says Helene Hollub, one half of the 56-year-old, second-generation design and construction firm she heads with brother Harry Hollub. "And we are not finished until the final accessory is in place."

Recently completing this new, 12,585-square-foot masterpiece in Miami's Village of Pinecrest, Harry and Helene created the perfect cutting-edge, Key West-style home that combines traditional and local architectural motifs with a modern interior that is both warm and sophisticated. And the last piece put in its place — a heart sculpture by artist Romero Britto on the living room table — clearly shows that a lot of love was put into this project.

Starting in the family room, a striped area rug designed by Gene Meyer for NIBA covers the floor and establishes a warm, bright palette for the space. A walnut cocktail table mimics the light hue of the wood found on the cypress-beamed ceiling, while pears reign in the adjacent breakfast area. In the nearby kitchen, rows of vertically stacked, flat river stones create a visually and texturally appealing wall for the island base. Designed for serious cooks, the kitchen boasts the latest Sub-Zero and Wolf appliances, as well as a "Waterstation" sink with built-in colanders and cutting boards.

In the dining room, a touch of Hollywood glamour is seen in two crystal light fixtures that hang over the table. Steps away, the living room's black-leather "Barcelona" daybed by Mies van der Rohe centers a seating area that fronts the keystone fireplace. White agglomerate marble flooring from Coverings Etc flows throughout.

Marble flooring turns to white American oak in the master bedroom, providing a base for the darker-toned furnishings. Floor-to-ceiling glass doors and windows from La Finestra allow for an abundance of light, while bed coverings continue the home's persimmon and ochre palette. Outside, waterfalls and large boulders create a tropical ambiance for entertaining. A two-toned Diamond Brite™ finish and Oceanside reflective glass tiles provide added sparkle in the pool.

Every detail of this home was thoughtfully constructed to state-of-the-art specifications, including some of the more interesting eco-friendly aspects, such as the Key West-style, energy-rated, metal roof. "I take my responsibility as a steward of the environment very seriously," Harry says. "This energy-efficient, Category 5-rated home incorporates the latest 'green' technologies. It is beautiful to look at while integrating sustainable practices."

And Helene is also thrilled. "I love the balance of warmth, richness, opulence and comfort," she says. "I go to work everyday knowing that my brother and I can make the complex process of creating someone's dream home, from start to finish, both seamless and pleasurable."
